

Edith Lodergran

V a

December the 19th.

Dictation

The fathers return.

It is evening. The sun has just gone down. Crimson streaks shine in the west. The birds have gone to roost, and the animals to their green ~~etc~~ couches. The great bell of the farm-yard rings cheerily. The farmer prepares to go home. At home his ~~wife~~ is waiting for him. Her eldest daughter helps her to lay the cloth. Then she places his chair, where he likes it to be.

The father enters. The children surround him; they take the sickle out of his hand; they make him sit down; baby clings on his knee; he caresses them all, and soon forgets his toil and his cares

1

1m

5

December the 19th

When getting up the morning

1 I find the weather very cold

and the snow is very deep

and the wind is very strong

and the snow is very deep

and the wind is very strong

and the snow is very deep

and the wind is very strong

and the snow is very deep

and the wind is very strong

and the snow is very deep

and the wind is very strong

and the snow is very deep

and the wind is very strong

and the snow is very deep

and the wind is very strong